DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 5 to 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Japanese patent 57-104650 (submitted by applicant) alone or in view of Umeno et al (US Patent No. 4,591,133) or Plata et al (US Patent No. 5,382,306).

The English abstract of JP'650 discloses a method for producing a steel having a dual-phase microstructure consisting of ferrite and 1 to 30% martensite by subjecting hot rolled steel to cooling at 5 to 30C/sec followed by a second faster cooling at greater than 30C/sec. More specifically, note the paragraph above Table 1 on page 273 of JP'650 wherein first cooling occurs at 20C/sec or 30C/sec followed by a faster cooling of 60C/sec. Also note specific examples 4 to 9 in Table 2 on page 274 contain ferrite with 10 to 25% martensite which meets applicant's claimed microstructure.

JP650 does not specifically disclose a cooling device, but a cooling device would be implicit in the method claims. Note in order to perform the method of cooling, a cooling device having 2 cooling stages has to be implemented. Cooling by a series of cooling spray or by one adjustable cooling spray is well known in the art, as evident by secondary references and hence would be a matter of choice well within the skill of the artisan and productive of no new and unexpected results.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed March 12, 2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. It was argued that the prior art method uses temperature at Ar1 point and 550C as a guideline for cooling stage 1 whereas applicant's guideline is determined by the percent of at least 70% austenite transformed into ferrite. It is the examiner's position that the temperature taught by JP'654 would inherently possess at least 70% austenite transformed into ferrite because the end result product contains over 70% ferrite, as evident by end-product examples 4 to 8 in table 2 on page 274.

It was argued that there is no suggestion in regard to the type of cooling in the first slow and second cooling stages. It is the examiner's position that means of cooling by a series of sprays or by one adjustable cooling spray are well known in the art, as evident by the general teachings of the secondary references, and hence would be a matter of choice well within the skill of the artisan to implement and productive of no new and unexpected results.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
